

Satellite Radio provides services local broadcasters refuse to, selections of news, sports, music, and weather that locals will not do. they cater to the yowling and howling generation and will not consider middle aged and older needs, satellite does this better than any local station and it is about time the FCC stopped forcing customers to eat whatever local broadcasters want to force on us.

Let local broadcasters compete for customers rather than giving them a forced audience, if their product were any good we would not be having this conversation. There would be no need as everyone would be happy with the local stuff, but instead there is a high degree of dissatisfaction and the FCC has had little concern for the consumer in this, it all seems to be to protect the local broadcasters, let them earn our respect and listenership, do not shut down our options.
